

MAIN BUILDINGS OF INTEREST

1 CHAPEL OF CROSSES

The festival held on the 3rd May has been celebrated for centuries in the historic city centre. The opening of the five chapels and the decoration of crosses, both public and private, has also been observed for centuries.

- 1A CHAPEL OF THE GREEN CROSS
- 1C CRUZ DE LOS HERREROS CHAPEL
- 1E CRUZ DE LOS PLATEROS CHAPEL

2 CHURCH AND EX-CONVENT OF SANTO DOMINGO DE GUZMAN

THE BUILDINGS DATE BACK to the sixteenth century and it was the third convent built in the city. Its facade is simple though the red stone stands out. It was widely used in traditional Canarian buildings, and the eighteenth-century belfry.

THE CHURCH HOUSES Mudejar coffered ceilings, important works of imagery and jewellery, as well as Pedro de Gueza's unfinished mural and Mariano de Cosío's fresco.

THE CHURCH NEXT TO THE CHURCH was the convent itself. In the nineteenth century it became a rectory, an ecclesiastical jail and a diocesan seminary. Since 2002 it houses municipal offices. Inside, the cloister and the stone staircase stand out.

3 SANTA CATALINA DE SIENA MONASTERY

IT IS THE CONVENT OF CLOISTERED NUNS of the Dominica order. It opened in 1611 with four nuns and a small footprint, but at the end of the century it grew to over a hundred nuns forcing gradually to expand and fill the entire block as it remains today.

ITS HIGH EXTERIOR WALLS without main architectural elements are typical of Canarian convents located in the cities. The red stone porticulis stands out, as well as the shields on the same stone and the two mullioned windows and latticed wooden balconies.

THE CHURCH IS ATTACHED to the convent and is covered in wood and has a large silver altar with its tabernacle. In it, every February 15th the incorrupt body of Sister Maria who died in 1731 is exhibited.

4 SAINT MIGUEL'S CHAPEL

IT WAS BUILT IN 1506 by order of Governor Fernández de Lugo under the patronage of Archangel Miguel patron saint of Tenerife and co-patron of La Laguna, as a family vault, but was never used for that. It was used for council meetings while the building that would house them was being constructed.

IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY it was rebuilt establishing its present dimensions. In the twentieth century, the Island Council underwent major restoration of it and it is now used as an exhibition hall.

5 OLD DOMINICAN SCHOOL

IT WAS BUILT IN the eighteenth century. Although its facade was built in 1912 with Gothic style, its interior has a traditional Canarian architecture. It housed the School of the Dominicans nuns and now houses municipal offices.

6 SAN CRISTÓBAL DE LA LAGUNA TOWN HALL

IT WAS BUILT IN 1511 to house the council of the island (Cabildo) local administration of Castilian cities of the time, which continued in La Laguna until the Constitution of Cadiz of 1812 when local councils were formed.

IT HAS UNDERGONE NUMEROUS CHANGES, the most important to its facade in 1822 which has been preserved until today. It has a neoclassical style, covered with stone slabs from a quarry in Tequesta and topped with a marble shield of the city.

INSIDE IT HOLDS THE STANDARD Fernández de Lugo was wearing when he conquered Tenerife and the Royal Charter Juana La Loca awarded La Laguna with the title of Villa.

7 MAGISTRATE HOUSE

IT IS ONE OF THE OLDEST buildings in the city dating back to 1540 and forming part of the premises of the island council (Cabildo). It was also used as a prison in the eighteenth century as the vaulted room that remains shows. There is only a red volcanic stone doorway left from the original building, one of the few examples of plateresque architecture in the Canaries.

IT GETS ITS NAME because it was the residence of the Island Magistrate. Nowadays it is part of the premises of the Town Hall.

8 ALHÓNDIGA HOUSE

BUILT AROUND 1709 it was used as a granary, open to the public where grain was stored, bought or sold. In 1809 it served as a barracks and in the second half of the nineteenth century it served the Courts House. Today is part of the municipal offices.

9 HOUSE OF ALVARADO-BRACAMONTE OR OF THE CAPTAIN GENERAL

CAPTAIN GENERAL Diego de Alvarado Bracamonte ordered to build it after seventeen century and some general captains reside in it during the eighteenth century, hence its name.

HIGHLIGHTS INCLUDE its portal and window openings carved in red tuff and the decorative motif in the 1990s. Inside, the courtyard with stone columns is an example of so-called "Canarian patio".

10 RIOQUEL HOUSE

ANTONIO RIOQUEL ORDERED IT to be built in the eighteenth century. The building faces two streets and in them it is obvious the difference in the use of construction materials. The main facade is on Carrera Street, one of the largest in the city. To highlight this part of the house red stone was used on both floors, framing the front door and the central window upstairs. However, for the secondary facade in Tahara de Cala Street more modest materials were used.

THE CENTRE WINDOW upstairs. However, for the secondary facade in Tahara de Cala Street more modest materials were used.

AN ESTATE OF EIGHTEENTH CENTURY traditional Canarian style, with three floors, with smaller openings on the first two floors and with a balcony of lattices that stands out on the centre of the top floor.

THE CHAPEL ON THE RIGHT is connected to the house and has served as a family chapel for their religious services. The dedication of this chapel has given the name to the Avenida de la Trinidad (Trinity Avenue).

THE HOUSE HAS BEEN INHABITED throughout its history by Peraza de Ayala family, who are currently occupying it.

12 OUR LADY OF LOS REMEDIOS CHURCH-CATHEDRAL

LOCATED IN THE HISTORICAL CENTRE its construction began in 1235 as the second parish church of the city and is promoted to Cathedral in 1819.

OVER THE CENTURIES it has undergone numerous modifications that led to its demolition in 1897, preserving only the neoclassical style facade. The rest of the work is neogothic style and dates back to the early twentieth century.

IT IS ONE OF THE FIRST CONCRETE BUILDINGS built in Spain, which led to structural problems, this forced a complete rebuild of the roof and dome.

INSIDE THERE ARE TREASURES like Mazaros altarpiece in the chancel, brought from Flanders; the marble pulpit of Carrera as well as artwork from Cristóbal Hernández de Quintana, Juan de Miranda or Luján Pérez.

13 MUSTELIER HOUSE

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY Canarian houses were often built with a rhythm in the window and door openings. The upper windows had their replicas on the doors or lower windows, but this does not occur in Mustelier House. On the top floor they built four windows and two lateral doors and a central one on the ground floor.

When decorating this, there was no gap between the upper windows. For this reason, the Stone Baroque decoration took a rectangular shape, to match the existing space.

14 BIGOT HOUSE

THIS THREE-STORY HOUSE, built in 1654 is possibly the first of its kind. While it was customary to use the third floor as the barn, the owner, Claudio Bigot, decided to build a balcony in front of the barn as a decorative element to the facade. This served as the inspiration for other wealthy and nobles in the city.

15 FRANCO DE CASTILLA HOUSE

IT IS A GOOD EXAMPLE of eighteenth century stately building. The style of the door and window openings is of the traditional Canarian house, broken only by the portico and pediment, decorated in the Canarian Baroque style.

A FIRE DESTROYED much of the interior of the building, but the elements that remain show the splendour that the family must have had. This is evident on the stairs to the right or the patio columns holding the two sides of the upper gallery.

16 TORREHERMOSA MARQUIS HOUSE (AGÜERE HOTEL)

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY building typical of the gentry of the time and with neoclassical decorative elements.

IN 1776 IT WAS INHABITED by the Bishop of the Canaries, after that it was the residence of the Bishop's cohort and later living accommodation for the Institute of the Canaries Islands. In 1880, it was transformed into a hotel, retaining its original facade and remains open under the name of Hotel Agüere. The interior has been completely altered.

17 LEAL THEATRE

ANTONIO LEAL ORDERED its construction in 1915. The decoration of the facade is a tribute to his work, with floral elements, animals and characters. Inside the murals and ceiling art stand out. The auditorium has four floors and a large horseshoe with a capacity of over 1000 seats.

ALONG WITH THE CASINO, it met the needs of leisure and culture of the city for much of the twentieth century. It witnessed the first cinematographic projection of the city and the first Canarian film.

18 CASABUENA HOUSE (COURT OF THE INDIES)

THE WEST INDIES TRADE was controlled from Seville, however, in the sixteenth century the Canaries Islands obtained permission to trade directly with America. To control this market the position of Superintendent Judge of the West Indies was created.

THIS HOUSE, designed with commercial use in mind, changed when Sir Bartholomew Casabuena bought the right for the site in 1708. The house was then used to control much of the trade with America to become the Indies Court.

As a sign of economic distinction a huge wooden balcony is built at the rear of the house and in front of the barn, copying Burgos' one.

19 OUR LADY OF THE CONCEPTION CHURCH

IT IS THE OLDEST parish church in Tenerife. The original temple was adjacent to the ancient lagoon but due to its small size, in 1515, moved to this site.

OVER THE CENTURIES it has undergone numerous modifications. The nave and aisles are of the sixteenth century, while its head is of the seventeenth century.

THE CHURCH LACKS elaborate facade and none of the side door has a remarkable architectural development. Its most distinctive feature is the carved by the late seventeenth century, representative symbol of the city.

The building houses a rich artistic heritage which include coffered ceilings, the wooden pulpit, the altar of the Church of Souls and the font in which the reduced Guanches were baptized.

20 CHURCH AND EX-CONVENT OF SAINT AGUSTIN

THE AUGUSTINIAN PRIARS accompanied the conquerors of Tenerife and they were the first order that settled in the city in 1506.

ALTHOUGH ARCHITECTURAL ELEMENTS were added such as the front tower or the adjoining eighteenth century church, destroyed by fire in 1964, the building retains many of its original elements. Among them, the inner cloister, one of the best examples of Renaissance cloisters in the Islands, which include the capitals of the upper floor.

THE CHAPEL ON THE RIGHT is connected to the house and has served as a family chapel for their religious services. The dedication of this chapel has given the name to the Avenida de la Trinidad (Trinity Avenue).

IT WAS THE FIRST COLLEGE and later only secondary school in the Canaries. Illustrious cultural characters such as Benito Pérez Galdós, Oscar Domínguez and Juan Negrín attended it.

21 OSSUNA HOUSE

IT WAS BUILT IN THE LATE seventeenth century and presents a symmetrical openings facade with the exception of the front door, which is quite eccentric. The wood is used as an element of distinction in the windows of the second floor and in the large balcony.

TODAY IT HOUSES a museum and the archive of the rich historical collection that Manuel de Ossuna left.

IT IS ONE OF THE FIRST CONCRETE BUILDINGS built in Spain, which led to structural problems, this forced a complete rebuild of the roof and dome.

INSIDE THERE ARE TREASURES like Mazaros altarpiece in the chancel, brought from Flanders; the marble pulpit of Carrera as well as artwork from Cristóbal Hernández de Quintana, Juan de Miranda or Luján Pérez.

22 LOS SABANDENOS MUSEUM HOUSE

THE HOUSE MUSEUM Los Sabandenos is an interesting sample of a traditional Canarian trading house. It comprises a wide central gallery for the passage of beasts and wagons to the courtyard and attached warehouse. It has two floors: subdivided into the commercial ground floor, mezzanine for the servants and superior for housing.

IT CURRENTLY HOSTS a centre of study and testing as well as a historical sample of Los Sabandenos, a Canarian music group with deep roots and prestige. It also includes a sample of musical instruments and a unique library.

23 OUR LADY OF LOS DOLORES HOSPITAL AND CHURCH

THE HOSPITAL WAS FOUNDING IN 1515 as the first town centre charity hospital and kept its location until 2005.

IN THE LATE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY, the hospital and the church were remodelled. On the facade of the Hospital, located in Juan de Vera Street, the highlights are the window frames and the red stone, which dates back to the first construction of the building, in the sixteenth century. Inside the offices are spread around the cloister.

Today, it houses the municipal library.

FROM THE CHURCH, in San Agustín Street, the highlights are the steeple of stone and the eighteenth century stone front, with pre-Hispanic Latin American influence on the base of the columns.

24 UQUE BOTINO HOUSE (CONSULATE OF THE SEA)

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY BUILDING whose neoclassical facade with framed hollow stonework, balcony railings and large cornice reflects a nineteenth-century reform. It has another more austere facade on the Tahara de Cala Street.

IT HAS A LARGE FLAGSTONE PATIO, lush vegetation and a journey through a gallery closed with ash windows.

IT HOSTED THE Royal Consulate of the Maritime and Terrestrial of the Islands from late 1786 until 1829 and dealt with the development of agriculture, industry and to monitor and improve trade with America.

25 SALAZAR PALACE (BISHOP'S PALACE)

THE FIRST EARL OF SALAZAR ordered its construction in 1664 and he lived here with his family until the late nineteenth century when it became the Bishop's palace. The two shields are their witnesses: the facade's one represents the Salazar family and the yard's gate one belongs to the Bishop Torrijos.

ITS FACADE STONWORK shows the social status of their owners. It is an example of early Canarian Baroque and it is considered the best preserved civil facade in the Canaries. The portal is modelled after the House of Nova's columns, baroque pediment and central balcony railings.

IN 2006 A FIRE DESTROYED it completely, leaving only the facade standing.

26 JESUITS HOUSE

THE JESUITS ARRIVED in La Laguna in the seventeenth century, but they built this building in the first half of the eighteenth century. With strong stately Canarian style and Baroque decorative elements it tries to impose the power of this order in Tenerife.

ONCE EXPELLED FROM SPANISH TERRITORY in the late eighteenth, much of the cultural movement on the island took place in this building. It was home to the literary University of San Fernando and it had various educational uses, until the Royal Economic Society of Friends of the Country was reinstated in the building. It currently holds a magnificent historical archive.

27 LERCARO PALACE

THE LERCARO FAMILY was possibly one of the most influential of Tenerife during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

IT IS CLEAR THE ITALIAN ORIGIN of the family in the style of the palace. The Genoese style portico and facade decorated, imitating brick, the Renaissance drawings and especially inside the main courtyard, the Renaissance inspiration is evident in the rich paneled and carved anthropomorphic figures in the columns, both in the upper gallery.

THE BUILDING HAS BEEN RESTORED and adapted to house the Museum of History and Archives of Tenerife.

28 CRISTINO DE VERA INSTITUTION

Built in the eighteenth century, is one example of local Canarian architecture. The interior has been adapted for a museum and now houses the Museum of Contemporary Art "Cristino de Vera Institution - CajaCanarias Cultural Space". It is a magnificent example of permanent collection of paintings and drawings by the Canarian artist Cristino de Vera.

The paintings display meaning in each of his strokes, his vision of the world, life and death. It also has rooms for activities, cultural events and exhibitions.

29 MONTAÑÉS HOUSE

THIS EIGHTEENTH CENTURY HOUSE is the current headquarters of the Advisory Council and it has certain peculiarities. Its very spacious hallway allowed the passage of carriages and wagons which were unloaded into storage rooms and came to the back yard through the door at the end. Therefore, there are only columns on three sides of the courtyard, leaving a space on the left for the passage of vehicles.

The height of its columns stands out due to the existence of the mezzanine. This consists of building the lower level higher, to divide it, thus providing a floor for storage and one for the servants' house.

30 LINARES HOUSE

IT SHOWS MANY of the elements of traditional eighteenth century Canarian houses: cornerbacks in stone, symmetrical rhythm of the holes in the facade and ash windows with frames fitted with wooden bearings, which in this case, are finely carved. The only thing missing is a balcony among the traditional construction elements.

IN ADDITION TO THE HEIGHT ACHIEVED with its three floors, the house adds greater height by subdividing the lower floor into a basement-cellar and a dwelling as in the neighbouring Montañés house, competing for distinction and prestige.

31 VAN DEN HEEDÉ HOUSE

IT WAS BUILT IN THE EIGHTEENTH century for this Flemish family. Its sober facade gives way to a splendid courtyard with columns and lush vegetation, surrounded by three closed corridors to protect from the winter cold of the area. The floor of the vestibule, the lobby and corridors around the courtyard are made of basalt. The woodwork also stands out.

32 NAVA PALACE

JORGE GRIMÓN ACTIVELY PARTICIPATED in the conquest of Tenerife under the orders of Governor Fernández de Lugo. He received numerous lands for his contribution and acquired location in La Laguna next to the Governor's property.

HE'S HEIRS ERRECTED THIS BUILDING, expanding and enhancing it as the family's power increased achieving its maximum development in the eighteenth century. Tomas Nava Grimon and Portier made the last reforms, completely covering the facade with stone and decorative elements combining three different styles: Mannerism, Baroque and Neoclassical. He also started the cultural and sociopolitical reforms in Tenerife through the Nava Social circle.

33 AZERO RODRIGUEZ MANSION

THIS BUILDING of the early twentieth century encompasses several historical values (eclecticism): an evocation of palatial French Renaissance architecture represented in an ostentatious sloping roof. Inside, a neorazant neopompeian courtyard and a main hall. Today it houses the headquarters of the La Laguna Casino.

34 SAN JUAN BAUTISTA LAS CLARAS MONASTERY

IT WAS THE FIRST NUNNERY established in the Canaries Islands, settling in the city in 1577. In 1697 a fire destroyed most of the building and the building which can be seen today is broadly a result of the rebuilt.

BEING A CLOISTERED CONVENT, its external appearance is sober and of high walls. Highlights include the mullioned or veranda and the front of the church with its barred windows and the two doorways of red stone.

THE CHURCH HAS A SINGLE NAVÉ, with Mudejar art with gold embossing at its centre representing Saint Francisco and Saint Clara.

35 EX-CONVENT OF SAN MIGUEL DE LAS VICTORIAS - SANCTUARY OF CHRIST OF LA LAGUNA

FOUNDED BY THE FRANCISCAN ORDER, its construction began in 1506. The works lasted a long time because they were painted by ants. In the seventeenth century a differentiated main chapel and four side chapels were rebuilt. In 1810 a fire destroyed almost everything and the rebuilding preserved until today, did not reach the splendour of the former.

THE CHURCH HAS the status of Royal Shrine. In it you can find the image of the Holy Christ of La Laguna, one of the most revered statues in the Canaries Islands and the most important in its typology, Gothic and Flemish. The altar, which holds it, also stands out embodied in silver brought from South America.
